Tippecanoe County Historical Association

Business and Corporate Membership Options

The history of the United States is preserved and interpreted primarily on the local level. The power of local history is the preservation of a community's memories and experiences—a way to help us acquire a sense of place in the present and propel us toward the future with hope and commitment.

This is what we do! The Historical Association captures “time”, keeps it safe, brings it out and tells the stories again and again, generation after generation. And as we move into the future, we bring with us those times - the ones that made us who we are today.

Today, Tippecanoe County is one of the leading counties in the state with a growing and diverse population, a well-balanced economy and a rich cultural and educational heritage. Learning about the local history helps bring people together with a common interest in understanding the place they now call home.

The Tippecanoe County Historical Association would not be able to create this historical consciousness for our community without our members and donors. Your membership support is needed now more than ever as we strive to expand our offerings, preserve the vital heritage of our community and demonstrate the power of local history in our county.

Program Sites:

Tippecanoe Battlefield Interpretative Center & History Store

200 Battleground Ave
Battle Ground, IN 47920
(765) 567-2147

The Museum and adjacent memorial commemorates and interprets the nationally significant November 7, 1811 Battle of Tippecanoe. The Museum focuses on the Battle, early settlement and nineteenth century Native American life styles. The History Store features a large assortment of books on America, Indiana, military and Native history and culture and offers reproduction historic goods, collectables and period clothing.

Fort Ouiatenon Blockhouse

3921 South River Road
4 miles southwest of West Lafayette

Fort Ouiatenon was Indiana's first permanent European settlement, with a replica of an eighteenth century fur trading post. The Blockhouse is open May-August weekends only. This is also the site of the annual Feast of the Hunters' Moon a historical reenactment featuring traditional crafts, goods, food and life-styles of the 18th century trade period.

Frank C. Arganbright Genealogy Center Alameda McCollough Research Library Richard Wetherill Archives

1001 South Street
Downtown Lafayette
(765) 476-8411

The Center houses our library, collections, archives, and museum store. It is the number one destination for all researchers tracing their family heritage or exploring other areas of local history.

The Photo Archives contain thousands of photographs and negatives of buildings and scenes documenting Tippecanoe County's history. The photo archives also contain a portrait collection of persons in the county.

Additionally, the TCHA Archive collection contains over 250 business, organizational, and personal collections of materials. Archive access is by appointment only.

The Alameda McCollough Genealogy Research Library is open Thursdays and Fridays 1 to 5pm and the first and third Saturdays of the month 10am to 2pm. The Library (only) is closed January and Holidays.
